A group of Sorority Sisters have filed a lawsuit against the University of Wyoming for allowing a transgender male to live in their sorority house.

The complaint was filed by 7 members of the Kappa Kappa Gamma Sorority house arguing that the sorority is a “single-sex organization.”

The complaint alleges the male, Artemis Langford, had “visible erections” on a regular basis and repeatedly sexually harassed the girls.

Autogynephilia is defined as a male's propensity to be sexually aroused by the thought of himself as a female. It is the paraphilia that is theorized to underlie transvestism and some forms of male-to-female (MtF) transsexualism.

These poor girls probably felt peer pressured into accepting this man into their community. It is unfortunate that a situation like this has to happen for people to hopefully realize that this is not okay and never should be okay. This man belongs in a padded room.
